

Contributors

Kolawole Adeniyi is a Senior Lecturer at the Department of Linguistics and African languages, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria. His research interests include phonetics and phonology, especially the phonology of West Benue-Congo languages.

Ezekiel T. Bolaji is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of English at the Lagos State University of Education, Nigeria. He holds a Ph.D. in the English language, and his research interests include morphology, phonetics and phonology (especially the phonology of West Benue-Congo languages), contact linguistics.

Eliaser N. Joseph is a high school teacher through the Ministry of Education, Arts, and Culture. He teaches English as a Second Language and Oshikwanyama as a First Language to students in grades eight through eleven at Engela Secondary School in Ohangwena Region. He holds a Bachelor of Education (Honours), and his research interests include Oshikwanyama lexicography, linguistics, and Oshiwambo cultural practices.

Claudius P. Kihara is a Senior Lecturer in Linguistics at Chuka University in Kenya. He earned his Ph.D. in General Linguistics at the Heinrich-Heine University in Düsseldorf. His research interests include Bantu languages, complex sentences, Functional theories of language, morphology-syntax interfaces, linguistic typology, information structure, pragmatics, sociolinguistics and cognitive linguistics.

Petrus Angula Mbenzi is a Senior Lecturer of Oshiwambo at the University of Namibia in the Department of Language and Literature Studies. He holds a BA, BAHONS, DSPE, and MA in Oral Literature of Oshiwambo and a Ph.D. in Sociolinguistics. His research interests include onomastics, orature, and intercultural communication.

Catherine Efeti Mokoko is interested in the prosody of the Coastal Bantu languages of Cameroon. She has worked on the complex systems of intonation, stress, rhythm and tone, and how they behave and interact in these languages. She is currently undertaking her PhD research in Linguistics at the University of Buea, Cameroon.

Kosmas N. Ngisheenhapo is a teacher at Mwadinomho Combined School in the Ohangwena Region. He holds a Bachelor of Arts in English and Oshikwanyama (Honours). He is the author of two novels in Oshikwanyama and writes newspaper articles from time-to-time on the Oshiwambo language and culture. His research interests include reading, writing, and Oshiwambo oral traditions.

Deogratias Ngonyani is an Associate Professor of Linguistics and African languages. His research interests include language documentation, word structure, Bantu languages and Swahili studies in general. He has taught at the University of Dar es Salaam (Tanzania), Pwani University (Kenya), UCLA, and Indiana University.

Paule Jessica Nguete Dindo is currently teaching at the German International School in Yaoundé, Cameroon. Additionally, she holds a Masters in Linguistics from the University of Yaoundé 1, Cameroon, where she specialized in phonology.

Ebitare F. Obikudo is a Senior Lecturer in Linguistics at the Department of Linguistics and Communication Studies, University of Port Harcourt, Nigeria. Her research interests include describing the phonetics, phonology, and morphosyntax of Ijoid languages and other lesser described African languages.

Oso Ibitayo Olamide teaches in the Department of General Studies at Ekiti State Polytechnic, Isan Ekiti. His research interests include pragmatics, discourse analysis, sociolinguistics, and applied linguistics. He has published articles within and outside Nigeria.

Abdul-Rahman Fusheini is a Lecturer at the University of Education, Winneba, Ghana. His areas of research interest include the Dagbani language, phonetics and phonology, language usage, and assessment.

Troy E. Spier is Assistant Professor of English and Linguistics at Florida A&M University (USA). He earned his MA and Ph.D. in Linguistics at Tulane University, his B.S.Ed. In English/Secondary Education at Kutztown University, and a graduate certificate in Islamic Studies at Dallas International University. His research interests include language documentation and description, discourse analysis, corpus linguistics, and linguistic landscapes.